THE SINGLE TAX

Wells Drury Tells How it Would Effect Carson

The following is the conclusion of Mr. Wells Drury's Single Tax argument, portions of which have been published in two previous issues of the APPEAL:

Nevada's laws are such that the grower of cattle or sheep or horses is compelled to scatter his stock all over the ranges during assessment time to keep the Assessor from finding out how many head of stock he owns. The rancher knows that he is bound to lose some through this scattering process, and so when called on to give a true list of his chattels, he makes a generous guess of the decrease and lets it go at that. Who blames him? He knows that by his industry and intelligence he has increased the supply of useful animals fitted for the use of mankind, and instinctively he feels that it is wrong for the government to punish him, when he has done a good for the community, by the imposition of a tax on the product of his labor.

That is exactly what the State, municipal and county authorities of Nevada are constantly doing. No wonder the people of Nevada are poor, when all the laws of the State tend to make personal property hard to get and still harder to hold.

Let Nevada adopt the Single Tax and the Virginia & Truckee, the Carson & Colorado, the Eureka & Palisade the Nevada & California and the logging railroads about Lake Tahoe would soon begin to pay big dividends. The shops at Carson would be filled with busy artisans and every town and village in the State would revive. I can see that in Nevada the well-to-do and the wealthy would be benefited more than the poor and those in moderate circumstances. It would particularly help those who owned improved real estate in the towns, and would be a blessing to the ranchers.

We Nevadans know that there is not a more blessed spot on earth than Nevada in which to live, with its delightfully refreshing springtime, the genial, but not too sultry summer, a sweetly drawn out, restful autumn, and brief, crisp winter. Yet these natural advantages are set at naught—absolutely nullified by the tax laws, which are constantly evicting public-spirited citizens, and which lay unreasonable burdens on all who attempt to introduce personal property into the State—by manufacture or otherwise. Tax the land values up to the true economic worth, and the land will still be utilized by human beings, and of course cannot be removed from your jurisdiction; whereas personal property flees to more favored communities, that is, where taxes are lower, as soon as possible. That is why all the bullion from the Comstock was hurried out of Nevada as fast as steam could carry it.

It was used to build up San Francisco's business blocks, because, though the same vicious system of taxation is in vogue in California, it is not so savagely enforced as in Nevada. On the other hand if you exempt personal property from taxation, nobody will wish to send it out of the State. The State would consequently grow in riches and in population, and that is just what we all hope to see accomplished. It would be the salvation of Nevada.

Broke Jail at Lovelock

Frank Bryan, charged with stealing a horse and saddle, escaped from the Lovelock jail Sunday night and at last accounts had not been recaptured. The jailer gave Bryan dinner about 5 o'clock in the evening, leaving him in the outer room of the jail. He went back in a few hours to lock Bryan up in a cell for the night, but his prisoner had pried the bars from over the door in the meantime and escaped. It is thought Bryan received assistance from the outside.—Silver State.

Miners for California

Forrest Farnum, formerly of the police department in this city, arrived here Saturday and left Monday night with Ed Kennedy, John Williams, Henry Feezy, J. G. Foote, Tom Craze and E. E. Robson for the mines at Four Hills, Plumas county, Cal. The boys will be employed to run machine drills. Farnum is just as good-natured as ever and didn't lose any of his size since leaving the Comstock.—Enterprise.

Hand Injured By a Bolt

One of the strangest accidents in the history of non-fatal casualties befell H. McLane, employed on the Dolph ranch in Churchill county, last week. Mr. Dolph and McLane were returning home last Friday from this city with an empty hay wagon, to which was attached a "back action" or smaller wagon.

When near the Newman ranch on the Carson river, McLane, while coupling the pole of the "back action" to the forward wagon, through a sudden settling down of the bed of the latter, was struck on the back of his left hand midway between the wrist and knuckles by a half-inch iron bolt, which passed entirely through the hand the screw end of the bolt protruding an inch or more through the palm. McLane was brought here and an examination by a local physician disclosed that none of the delicate bones on the back of the hand had been fractured and the chances are favorable that its use will not be impaired.—Chronicle.
